Manager Comment

October lived up to its reputation as a scary month for stocks. Solid earnings reports from the top technology companies were not enough to offset investors' worries over rising COVID-19 cases and uncertainty heading into the November elections. All three major averages were negative for the month, led low by the technology sector. Ten of the eleven S&P 500 sectors were in the red in October with only the communications sector turn in a positive monthly performance. Treasuries were also under pressure during the month, sending the 10-year yield to its biggest monthly increase since September 2018. Gold slipped 0.8% in October and the dollar was volatile finishing the month about where it started.

The Castlestone Low Volatility Income UCITS fund declined in October but outpaced the Dow Jones Industrial Average over the month. The Funds top performing sector was utilities and Alphabet (GOOG) was the top performing stock. The Funds top five holdings are PepsiCo, Nextera Energy, Visa, Apple and Microsoft.
