Manager Comment

US stocks ended the year with a strong December, all three major averages posted gains. The Dow Jones and S&P 500 Index both closed out the month at new intraday and all-time closing highs. Much of the equity rally in December was driven by the hope that the start to COVID-19 vaccinations would lead to a more normal 2021. Six of the eleven S&P 500 sectors finished the month in positive territory. Adding to the success equities enjoyed over the month was the low interest rate environment supported by the FED. Treasury yields did begin to recover in December with the both the 10-year bond and 30-year bond yields climbing 6.8 basis point over the month.

The Castlestone Low Volatility Income UCITS fund advanced in December. The financials turned in the fund's best performance by a sector although 10 of the 11 sectors we hold advanced in December. Information technology remains our highest weighted sector and the fund's top five names are Visa, Apple, Nextera Energy, PepsiCo and Microsoft Corp.
