Manager's Comment

The equity rally that began in June ran into a wall in August. All major asset classes except for the US dollar posted losses for the month. Stocks closed out August with a four-session losing streak, leaving the major averages down around 4% for the month. The selling pressure on equities intensified after Fed Chairman Jerome Powell's comments were more hawkish than expected during the Fed's annual retreat at Jackson Hole. The short end of the Treasury curve was pressured by Powell's promise to keep fighting inflation with the 10-year posting its largest monthly gain in yield since April. The yield curve remains inverted. Gold prices logged their fifth straight month of declines and oil prices were lower for a third straight month, while the US dollar scored its third straight month of gains. The FTSE 100 and most Asian markets outpaced the US in August.

The Castlestone Low Volatility Income UCITS fund moved lower during August, in line with the S&P 500. T-Mobile Inc and PayPal were removed from the fund to bring our technology and telecom weightings back in line. Energy and utilities were the only sectors in the fund to post positive returns for the month and energy remains the top performing sector on the year. The fund's top holdings are Apple Inc., Microsoft, Amazon.com, Tesla and Alphabet Inc.
