Manager's Comment

The major US equity averages all rebounded in October with the Dow Jones Industrial average leading the way. After a rough September, investors moved into more stable names during the month, pushing the Dow to its best October performance on record and its strongest monthly performance since January 1976. All eleven S&P 500 sectors posted gains for the month, led by the industrial sector. As of October 31, 52% of the S&P 500 have reported Q3 earnings with 68% of those companies' reporting revenues above expectations. The major headwind facing equities in October was rising interest rates. That is likely to continue as the markets are pricing in an 86% probability that the Fed will raise interest rates by another 75 basis points at their next meeting in early November. The benchmark 10-year Treasury note closed out October near 4%. Gold prices booked a seventh straight month of losses in October as rising rates and a strong dollar continued to weight on the precious metal. Oil prices reversed direction over the month and posted their first monthly gain since May.

The Castlestone Low Volatility Income UCITS fund recorded a gain of approximately 7% in October. Adjustments to the fund in October included a reduction of our exposure to Meta Platforms and the removal of Target, Newmont Corp, and Advanced Micro Devices from the fund. Caterpillar Inc posted the best monthly performance of the fund's holdings. The top weighted holdings in the Low Volatility fund in October were Apple, Microsoft, Amazon.com, Alphabet Inc, and Tesla.
