Manager's Comment

US stocks posted losses in February as the month delivered a series of economic reports that showed the US economy remains strong and inflation remains sticky. Hawkish comments by the Federal Reserve that remains committed to fighting inflation put pressure on risk assets. The Dow Jones posted its worst monthly performance since September 2022 and led the S&P and Nasdaq lower. The energy sector was the worst performing sector in February, while the information technology sector was the only one to show a gain.

The 25-basis point rate hike by the Fed on the first day of the month helped push Treasury yields to their biggest monthly gains since September and October of last year. Short-term yields climbed faster than the longer-dated bonds and the 6-month T-bill rate now sits above 5%. Gold prices closed the month lower as did crude.

The Castlestone Low Volatility Income UCITS fund posted a negative return in February as did most risk assets. Information Technology was the only one of the fund's sectors to record positive performance in the month and Nvidia was Low Volatility's top performing holding. To reduce the funds exposure to rate sensitive sectors; Crown Castle Inc. was removed from the real estate sector and Dominion Energy was removed from the Utility sector. The Fund's position in Intel was cut in half and reallocated to Nvidia. Low Volatility's top holdings in February were Apple Inc., Microsoft, Amazon.com, Nvidia and Berkshire Hathaway.
