Manager's Comment

US stocks posted losses in February as the month delivered a series of economic reports that showed the US economy remains strong and inflation remains sticky. Hawkish comments by the Federal Reserve that remains committed to fighting inflation, put pressure on risk assets, particularly small cap tech stocks. All three major US averages were lower for the month. The energy sector was the worst performer in February, while the information technology sector was the only one to show a gain.

The 25-basis point rate hike by the Fed on the first day of the month helped push Treasury yields to their biggest monthly gains since September and October of last year. Short-term yields climbed faster than the longer-dated bonds and the 6-month T-bill rate now sits above 5%. The spike in short-term rates was perceived as negative for the tech industry. Gold prices closed the month lower as did crude.

The Castlestone Next Generation fund gave back some of the gains it posted in January but remained up 10% for the year. Fintech was the fund's top performing sector in February and DraftKings Inc was its top stock. Desktop metal was replaced by 3D systems to rebalance our 3D printing sector. SNAP Inc and Pinterest Inc were removed from the fund for performance reasons. Next Generation is now comprised of 35 holdings with Tesla Inc, Iridium Communications, Exact Sciences, the ESG Private Equity Fund and Roku as the top holdings.
