Performance (Since Inception)

Manager Comment

In June US stocks rallied for the second straight month building on the recovery that began in May as President Trump began to soften his stance on tariff policy and several trade deals were announced. All three major US indices posted monthly gains, and the Nasdaq posted its best quarter since June 2020. Eight of the S&P 500 sectors posted positive performance for the month lead by the technology sector. Treasury yields fell in June as expectations of interest rate cuts later this year grew. Oil prices were volatile as tensions in the Middle East exploded into conflict and then quickly cooled down. Gold remained near record highs, but silver outperformed the yellow metal in the month. The US dollar index continued to fall reaching its lowest level since early 2022.

The Castlestone FAANG+ UCITS fund recorded a second straight month of positive performance. The FAANG+ fund was rebalanced in June with the removal of Arista Networks and the addition of Service Now and Palantir. The rebalancing gives the fund greater exposure to the artificial intelligence sector. FAANG's top performing stock in June was Oracle Inc.
