

WEEKLY COMMENTARY

01.23.2026

U.S. Equities

It was a volatile holiday shortened week for US equities. Volatility in global bond markets and President Trump's speech at the World Economic Forum in Davos heightened uncertainty for US stocks. Over the four trading sessions, the S&P 500 was down 0.5% and the Dow lost 0.6%, while the Nasdaq was flat as tech stocks regained some upward momentum.

Treasuries

Treasury yields retreated from five-month highs reached mid-week to end the holiday shorted week lower. Investors held steady in front of next week's Federal Reserve meeting, where no change to rates is expected. For the most part government bond yields have been range bound since October. The benchmark 10-year yield closed Friday at 4.23%.

Dollar

The dollar index continued its slide this week as President Trump's threats to acquire Greenland and then reversal on the issue weakened confidence in the greenback. The dollar index closed the week near three-month lows.

Gold

The price of gold recorded its largest one-week dollar gain on record and its best weekly performance in percentage terms since March of 2020 as geopolitical uncertainties helped drive demand for haven assets. Silver also had a strong week closing above $100.00 per ounce for the first time.

Oil

Oil prices scored a fifth straight week of gains supported by geopolitical and supply risks. On the holiday shortened week WTI climbed 2.9% and Brent rose 3.2%.

Please note the data in the chart below covers the last five trading days not the week as markets were closed last Monday.
