Manager Comment

US equities delivered mixed results in a volatile October. Concerns about spending on artificial intelligence infrastructure fueled a sharp technology selloff late in the month. Mega-cap technology earnings and a weak chipmaker outlook weighed on the Nasdaq and the S&P 500 as traders took profits in the technology sector. U.S. Treasury yields moved sharply lower in the month, finishing October with their biggest monthly decline since late 2023. A late-month flight to safety triggered by a tech stock sell-off and broader geopolitical risk drove investors into bonds. Oil prices surged over the month and gold weakened.

Castlestone FAANG+ UCITS fund moved lower in October in the with the technology sector but did outperform the SPDR Tech ETF (XLK). There were no changes to the fund's holdings. IBM was FAANG's top performing stock in the month. The funds exposure to old economy technology companies like IBM and Texas Instruments helped support the fund over the month

Fund Objective

The investment objective of the Sub-Fund is to generate capital growth mainly through exposure to the development, advancement and use of technology. The Sub-Fund will be invested predominantly in global technology equities some of which are familiarised by the acronym "FAANG" defining the most well-known technology equities, Apart from the FAANG equities, the Sub-Fund will also invest in other large technology stocks. However, The Sub-Fund may at any point in time deviate from allocating assets to the FAANG equities if this is deemed feasible in order to achieve the investment objective of the Sub-Fund. Up to 100% of the assets of the Sub-Fund may be invested in equities.
